

Farzand-e Khesal-e Khishtan (A Child of His Own Character) (Persian Edition)

Farzande Khesale Khishtan is the personal account of Asghar Parsa, Iran's National Front spokesman, during two historically unique junctures in contemporary Iranian history: the struggle for the nationalization of the oil industry (1950-1953) and the Islamic revolution of the 1979 and its aftermath. Parsa's memoirs is a very rich history of half a century of Iranian politics and provides a window into some of the hitherto untold stories of debates and political battles among the main contenders for power in Iran during the second half of the twentieth century: the Shah, Dr. Mohammad Mossadegh and the political Islamists who won state power in the 1979 revolution.
